Biggest Yom Sport yet

The Boston Jewish community's 14th annual Yom Sport (Sports Day) attracted its biggest turnout ever, with 161 athletes and 115 volunteers, last Sunday at Gann Academy in Waltham; story and more photos on Page 25.

Consul doesn't regret frankness

Still faces memo fallout

Had he to do it over, Nadav Tamir said he would still have written the controversial cable, but the distribution list would have been much, much shorter.

The Israeli consul general to New England suddenly found himself in the spotlight last month after the leak of a confidential memo in which he criticized his government's public stance toward the United States.

In an interview at his Boston office, Tamir talked about his summons to Israel, the rift in the New England Jewish community, his intention to serve out his fourth and final year as consul general and his
